Role purpose and role dimensions: Overview of the job	Internet and digital technologies have transformed and revolutionised the way we live from the way we use our homes, the way we work, bank, shop, access health care and how we socialise. Having access to high speed internet is now often described as the fourth utility and is an important consideration for people and businesses when they decide to move to an area. Customers want the convenience that technology brings with a personalised, easy to use service. Public services want to create more meaningful connections to better understand how best to serve residents' changing needs and to shape new resident behaviours. Even services that require some form of human interaction, including social care, can be enhanced by technology and can often help people to live independently for longer or for families to better support their loved ones. Like other local authorities, Redbridge is facing greater demand for services while receiving significantly less funding from central government. We need to use technology to improve the way we and our partners work and become even more efficient, making every pound count. Covid 19 has been the catalyst of digital change for both us as a council and for our residents and businesses. Digital has become the new norm and as such as a council we need to rethink how we "do business" delivering services in a digital world. We are establishing Digital as service in order to establish a continued sustained effort to transform our services across the council. The project manager will ensure that allocated projects are completed on time and within budget, that the project's objectives are met and that everyone tasked within the project are completing their allocated tasks. This role will stretch over a range of Digital programme initiatives and will take on an element of Programme Management Office functions in ensuring that that the Digital workstreams are working to project brief and timelines. Project managers oversee the project to ensure the desired result is achieved, the most
